A: General solution to the "Sybil mass" problem, provided by @JanNovak I don't know what the name of the problem actually is (it can't be Sybil since its not necessary to be a mass of Sybil). However, I think I found the problem, and the solution! In short, IDeAs are the events that could cause the exception, and IDeAs are tracked by the IUIAutomation interface. If you find out where any other interface gets events you can do the same with it, and track when the exceptions happen, and then the error code. Rapid multiplexed fluorescent in situ hybridization on polyacrylamide-coated glass slides with on-slide signal amplification. The detection of nucleic acid sequences can be made quantitative using nucleic acid probes or amplified by polymerase chain reaction. Quantification of detected sequences is often achieved by fluorescence microscopy. In situ hybridization on polyacrylamide gels has been used for nucleic acid detection, but with either manual or robotic methods, microplate scanning is required. We developed a prototype fluorescent scanning microplate for use with in situ hybridization on polyacrylamide gels. Signal amplification is achieved by simply placing the microplate on a nylon cover slip, sealed with adhesive tape, which restrains the gel until drying.
